RESEARCH AND CREATIVE WORK

Books

- Contracted Kanouse, Sarah. My Electric Genealogy. University of Minnesota Press for the Art After Nature series edited by Giovanni Aloï and Caroline Picard.
Based on the creative research project of the same name, the book manuscript brings together an extensively annotated performance script, an introduction by the artist, essays by noted environmental arts and humanities scholars, and excerpts of related projects by contemporary artists. Due February 2026.
- 2015 Brown, Nicholas A. and Sarah E. Kanouse. Re-collecting Blackhawk: Landscape, Memory, and Power in the American Midwest. University of Pittsburgh Press.
This book-length, photo-text essay combines 165 original, black and white photographs with text quotations to address the dialectic of Native absence and presence in Midwestern commemorative landscapes. In addition to the photo essay, the volume features an author's introduction, interviews with tribal personnel, and two concluding essays by Native scholars.
Reviews: SAIL, Foreword, H-Net, Journal of the Iowa Archeological Society.

Creative Work

- 2024 Kanouse, Sarah and Elizabeth Solomon, "Native Spaces," geolocated audio public art platform available at <https://findnative.space>.
Co-created with members of the Massachusetts Tribe at Ponkapoag, "Native Spaces" is a digital platform for sharing artful, place-based audio narratives of Indigenous survival, resistance, and resurgence in Eastern Massachusetts.
Public Installation:
City of Salem, MA - Department of Parks, Recreation and Community Services, October 11, 2024 - ongoing.

2022 Kanouse, Sarah, "My Electric Genealogy," multimedia performance, 75 minutes.

"My Electric Genealogy" uses the landscape infrastructure of Los Angeles to ask far-reaching questions about intergenerational environmental responsibility in the Anthropocene. Wearing a midcentury men's suit, I embody the legacy of my grandfather, whose career at the Department of Water and Power enabled L.A.'s growth between the 1930s and the 1970s. The performance stages live narration, original sound, and choreographed movement over filmic imagery to interrogate the racial and climate justice implications of our electrical infrastructure and to probe the aesthetic, ethical, and practical responses they demand.

Performances:

Massachusetts Institute of Technology, History, Theory and Criticism of Architecture and Art, Cambridge, MA - November 16, 2023.

Eco-Social Salon at The Rotunda, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, PA - November 11, 2023.

- 2022 Kanouse, Sarah, "Coronaura," essay film, 5 min 33 seconds.
An animated meditation on the challenges of solidarity at a time when a pandemic, a collapsing climate, and an ongoing racial reckoning have revealed undeniable White complicity in violence, both fast and slow. Layering found images and texts with animation and personal narration, the film is an intimate working through of the events of 2020, their long prehistory, and the possible futures just coming into view.
Screenings/Exhibitions:
Artists' Forum Festival of the Moving Image, New York, NY - October 13-15, 2022.
SENE Film Festival, Cranston, RI - October 15, 2022.
Big Muddy Film Festival, Southern Illinois University - February 27, 2022.
- 2021 Kanouse, Sarah with Elizabeth Solomon, "Native Space: Headwaters and Homelands," site-based nonfiction audio essay, 5 minute, 57 seconds.
The City of Medford, along with most of greater Boston, sits within the lands of the Massachusetts people and, despite development, it continues to be Native space. Elizabeth Solomon, an enrolled member of the Massachusetts Tribe at Ponkapoag, returns to the headwaters of the Mystic River to decolonize the view from the shores of Mystic Lake.
Public Installation:
Sound on Mystic, an audio public art platform developed by Ian Coss, Dwayne A. Johnson, and Gary Roberts, Arlington and Medford, MA – May 15-August 31, 2021.
- 2019-2021 Kanouse, Sarah, "Beyond Property," serial project consisting of an artist's book, suite of cards, and a poetic object. Book originally published as part of the series Field Guides to the Anthropocene Drift in conjunction with the Haus Der Kulturen Der Welt and the Max Planck Institute for the History of Science, Berlin. Cards, book, and object were then collected as part of "Over the Levee, Under the Plow: An Experiential Curriculum," co-coordinated with Ryan Griffin.
Grounded in the history of a parcel of family land, Beyond Property explores conflicting ideas of land ownership and occupancy in North America since the Orbis Spike of 1610. Framing property as a key driver of the Anthropocene, this collection of artists' publications, media, and objects considers the centuries-long rise of property and the many "otherwises" to the ownership model that were never extinguished by colonization and that form the basis of emerging frameworks that center the land as agent, rather than object.
Exhibitions:
Law Warshaw Gallery, Macalester College, St. Paul, MN - "Insurgent Ecologies: Hotter than July," September 18-December 10, 2023. Curated by Tia-Simone Gardner and Shana Griffin.

Haus der Kulturen der Welt, Berlin, Germany - "The Current," exhibition in conjunction with the seminar The Shape of a Practice, October 26-November 30, 2020. Exhibition venue closed November 1 due to Covid-19.

- 2020 Kanouse, Sarah, "To All to Whom These Presents Shall Come, Greetings," essay film, 4 minutes
- A meditation on deeptime, the violence of property, and survival in the face of attempted genocide and ecological loss. The title is taken from the first land patents awarded under the Homestead Act that transformed Ho Chunk territory into settler property - begging the question of to whom these "presents" came vs. from whom they were taken. Audio excerpted from a conversation with Bill Quackenbush, Tribal Historic Preservation Officer of the Ho-Chunk Nation, and sound of the creatures of woods and meadow of my family's 160-acre parcel of Wisconsin land.
- Screenings/Exhibitions:
- Diorama Room, Austin, TX - "Tune Into Green Program Five," streaming short film program, November 20, 2021-February 18, 2022.
 - Haus der Kulturen der Welt, Berlin, Germany - "The Current," exhibition in conjunction with the seminar The Shape of a Practice, October 26-November 30, 2020. Exhibition venue closed November 1 due to Covid-19.
- 2019 Kanouse, Sarah and Nicholas Brown, "Ecologies of Acknowledgement," essay film, 9 minutes, 53 seconds, and three-color letterpress print, 12"X19," edition of 10.
- "Ecologies of Acknowledgement" takes an expansive and critical approach to the practice of recognizing traditional Native territories - in this case, the islands of Boston harbor. The film uses impressionistic footage of the islands, interviews, and animation to move beyond the acknowledgement of the past and toward a sense of obligation to the politics of the present and future.
- Screenings/Exhibitions:
- Roxbury International Film Festival, Boston, MA - "Homage to Our Lands," June 19, 2021.
 - Tufts University, Tisch Gallery, Medford, MA - "Artist Response," September 2020-May 2021.

 - University of Massachusetts Boston, University Hall Gallery - "Local Ecologies," September 3-October 26, 2019 (catalog).
- 2019 Kanouse, Sarah, "Grassland," essay film, 19 minutes, 20 seconds.
- "Grassland" excavates the stratigraphic layers of belief, ecology, practice, and geology that form a northeastern Colorado landscape. Meditative original footage of the grassland merges with handmade collage animations and a richly textured soundtrack to explore the political ecology of a complex and unsettling place.

- 2021 Kanouse, Sarah and Shiloh Krupar, eds. "A People's Atlas of Nuclear Colorado," www.coloradonuclearatlas.org.
"A People's Atlas of Nuclear Colorado" is an ongoing digital public humanities platform that documents and interprets nuclear geographies and legacies of the Cold War. The Atlas draws together background information, archival materials, accessible scholarly essays, and artist interventions into the legacies of the domestic Cold War. Grounded in the specific location of Colorado and its nuclear materials and ecologies, the Atlas allows users to explore the US nuclear complex and its many scales of operation, relational geographies, and troubling future. Initial release featured material by 40+ contributors, including scholars, activists, and artists.

Courses Developed

2024-2025 ARTD 2101: Narrative Media and ARTD 2102: Seminar for Narrative Media (Northeastern University)

Explores the fundamentals of narrative and story development across the media arts, including photography, video, immersive media, games, graphic novels, and experimental and hybrid forms. Uses lectures, screenings, guest presentations, and in-class projects to expose students to a range of perspectives on narrative's role in society and professional opportunities in creative storytelling.

Proposed for NuPath Writing Intensive in the Discipline and Creative Expression and Innovation. Approved by Art + Design Curriculum Committee in September 2024 and CAMD Academic Affairs Committee in February 2025.

FA 2024 ARTD 3000: Topics in Media Arts - Experimental Animation (Northeastern University)

Introduces the dynamic tradition of animation as an expressive form through hands-on exploration of experimental techniques and practices spanning fine arts and commercial applications. Students will learn a wide range of techniques through individual and group exercises and create a final project expressing a personal aesthetic perspective. Contemporary and historic examples of experimental animation will be screened and discussed in class.

2022-2023 Dialogue of Civilizations - Tbilisi: Design for Justice and Democracy (Northeastern University)

Thirty years after independence and twenty five years after a bloody civil war, the former Soviet republic of Georgia is experiencing a wave of international investment that is transforming the capital city of Tbilisi but leaving urban residents disempowered and vast swaths of the countryside behind. As communist public spaces and collectivized property pass into private ownership, activists and artists have used creative tools not just to oppose top-down development decisions but to actively build other visions for a democratic, sustainable, and just future for a nation that is both ancient and still quite young. In a social context healing from division and disillusionment, how can design, architecture, and art foster inclusive and culturally-relevant practices of democracy?

- 2022-2023 ARTD 1001: Media Art, Culture, and Social Justice and ARTD 1002: Seminar for Media Art, Culture, and Social Justice (Northeastern University)
Introduces a wide range of perspectives on and practices of media art and social justice. Exposes students to key concepts, lineages, controversies, and consequences of media practices that expose injustice and seek to build a more equitable and sustainable world. Positions media arts as an intersectional and interdisciplinary practice connecting racial, gender, technological, and spatial/ environmental justice. Also serves as an introduction to this dynamic and growing field of professional practice, with illustrative case studies that include interdisciplinary creative work by CAMD faculty as well as leading international practitioners.
Fulfills NUPath "Engaging Differences and Diversity" and "Employing Ethical Reasoning" requirements.
- FA 2017 ARTD 6001: Art, Media, Participation I (Northeastern University)
Fosters the creation and understanding of contemporary interdisciplinary art, emphasizing how varied media strategies foster audience interaction and public engagement. Course activities include readings and discussions of key projects, theories, and professional practices as they have evolved over time, as well as scheduled critique of the students' ongoing bodies of work. Experiential learning opportunities allow students to interact with practitioners, curators, and institutions in the field. Paves the way toward the development of a graduate thesis project and seeks to foster growth as practicing artists, designers, and arts professionals.
- 2016-2017 ARTD 5001/ARTD 5002: Art, Context, Action I & II (Northeastern University)
A two-semester sequence of courses that examine a multitude of approaches to the creation and study of arts in the public sphere, including theory, methods, aesthetic debates, and professional practices as they have evolved in the field over time. The course includes regularly scheduled critique, review and defense of the students' ongoing bodies of work, as well as group experiential learning projects that allow students to interact with leading practitioners, curators, and institutions in the field.
- SP 2016 DA200: Topics in Dance - Participatory Arts (Colorado College, with Shawn Womack)
In both the visual and performing arts, contemporary artists have increasingly questioned the traditional relationship between art event, aesthetics, artist and audience. The role of the artist is reimagined. Rather than a visionary at the center of artistic production the artist becomes a facilitator for collective authorship, for building community and/or for activism. This course is designed for artist-students in visual art, dance, theatre, music and creative writing who desire to turn their artistic investigations towards a social practice. How might you share your artistic expertise to enable a larger public to become collaborators in the process towards the art event?
- SP 2015 ARTS1040: Elements of Media Art (University of Iowa)

Hands-on media production class for non-art majors to learn to shoot and edit high-definition video, use still images and found footage, and enhance your productions with sound. Grounded by key screenings, projects explore digital media for personal storytelling.

- SP 2014 INTM3730: Guerilla Curating (University of Iowa)
Out of the gallery and into the streets! This project-based workshop immerses students in the fiercely independent world of alternative art spaces, public art interventions, and artist-organized exhibitions. In addition to screenings, discussions, and readings on artist-led organizations and independent curating, students will gain hands-on experience conceiving, organizing, and promoting arts events. The class will collaboratively contribute to mounting and promoting an open-call exhibition in Iowa City and Cedar Rapids in conjunction with the Spring 2014 "Exuberant Politics" program. Students will also conceive and carry out temporary exhibitions that creatively exploit the margins and harness the potential of overlooked spaces on campus and in the community.
- SP 2013 INTM2730/CCL2864: Video As Art (University of Iowa)
Hands-on experience in video production for the artist! This intensive course teaches skills in digital video capture, editing, and presentation while providing an overview of video in the contemporary arts, including storytelling, installation, performance, and documentation. Several skill-building assignments lead to the creation of a final, self-initiated creative project.
- SP 2010 01J:104: Media Art Lab (University of Iowa)
This workshop supports study and production in the media arts, including digital video, sound, installation/performance, and Internet and new media art, for students with a range of experiences with media technologies. Conceptual development is stressed through regular readings and screenings, while technology skills are built in hands-on workshops using a range of media production equipment and platforms. In class and short-term projects lead to the development of a significant final piece of work that may relate to students' ongoing creative interests.
- SP 2009 01J:108: Art & Ecology (University of Iowa)
Structured as a collaborative, creative research group, Art & Ecology explores artistic responses to the environment and related social issues. Emphasis is placed on critical approaches rooted in the humanities. In the first half of the semester, the course examines student-chosen key themes in environmental discourse, paying particular attention to how artists have engaged them. In the second half of the semester, students develop individual or collaborative projects that may take the form of video, installation, performance, writing, sound, sculpture, drawing, printmaking, and/or electronic media.
- SP 2008 HONR351: Making Meaning (Southern Illinois University Carbondale)
In the last generation, art has exploded off the walls and pedestals, careened across multiple screens, and wandered into the spaces of everyday life. This course provides an integrated introduction for both understanding and creating contemporary media artworks. Students will be introduced to a number of production skills and critical perspectives in order to make imaginative, innovative, and socially relevant artwork. No prior experience in the arts or media production is assumed or required.
- 2007-2008 MCMA557: MFA Studio Practice (Southern Illinois University Carbondale)
This first year course for all incoming MFA students in the college serves as an introduction to media creation strategies and concepts. The emphasis is on aesthetic and conceptual development as encourtered within a variety of media arts. The course is team taught by a number of faculty in modules dedicated to various media forms—still image, time-based, spatial, and interactive.

- 2007-2008 MCMA558: MFA Studio Critique (Southern Illinois University Carbondale)
 This course focuses on the presentation of creative work, including: placing the work in historical/aesthetic context, writing about the work, and engaging in verbal critique. This course will help prepare you to write your MFA Research paper, as well as write grant applications and exhibition proposals.
- FA 2006 MCMA516: Multimedia as an Art Form: On and Off the Map (Southern Illinois University Carbondale)
 Over twenty years ago, Frederick Jameson advocated for a process of cognitive, political, and historical mapping to enable people to understand and traverse the complex and disorienting physical and conceptual landscapes of postmodernity. Since then, the process of mapping and the visual language of maps have emerged as strong elements in a good deal of contemporary media art. This course will focus on developing an understanding of and practical experience with new media and artistic mapping practices with special attention given to context and meaning.
- SP 2006 MCMA497: Intermedia/Transmedia (Southern Illinois University Carbondale)
 The terms “intermedia” and “transmedia” refer to the ways contemporary art blurs the lines between and among traditional and new media, process and product, and art and life. In this course, you will get an integrated introduction into the possibilities for contemporary artistic production and be encouraged to develop mobility among a range of media in order to make imaginative, innovative, and socially relevant artwork. The course will emphasize both making and meaning in contemporary artwork and provide a foundation in contemporary art practice and theory.
